LIMERICK LEADER.
MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 10.
A. Laudable Project
The laudable project of marking in the centenary and the anniversary of the Centenary of the foundation of the Christian Brothers to Limerick was inaugurated on Thursday last under circumstances that augur admirably for its complete success. The meeting held in the Town Hall afforded positive proof, if any were required, that the citizens are wholeheartedly and enthusiastically in sympathy with the movement on foot. It was large in numbers and of most representative character, and the best evidence that those present were in earnest in coming to give their support to the undertaking is furnished by the fact that a sum of about £100 was subscribed on the spot. The entire proceedings, a full report of which we give on page four of this issue, show that the matter has been taken up with most commendable spirit by those interested themselves in it. The manner in which it is proposed to mark the appreciation and gratitude of the citizens for a hundred years of noble and unselfish labours in their midst is, we understand, to be the carrying out of a work of utility and necessity. The accommodation of the boys' school in Sexton-street, as the Mayor in his opening remarks pointed out, is not adequate to its needs, and the intention is to supply the want by the erection of the required addition to the building. This addition, it appears, has been necessary for a number of years back and the present is a most appropriate time for supplying it. In the course of his speech Alderman Joyce, M.P., showed clearly that apart from the question of paying a compliment to the Christian Brothers it was very essential that the proposed work be carried into execution. When he occupied the Mayor's chair, he said, "I have had occasion to pay a visit to the Superior and the Brothers of the Christian Brothers in Sexton-street, and he found in 1905, to his great surprise, that the school was not able to accommodate the pupils, and was not large enough for the work the Christian Brothers had to carry on. He found even that there was an encroachment on the Monastery, and that one room under the Brothers' church had to be utilised for a technical class. There, without a word or a murmur of complaint, the Brothers performed their arduous task. Goodness knows, therefore, it was time for the citizens to wake up and do something to put an end to the state of affairs. It was only right and proper, added the Parliamentary representative of the city, "that the men who received their education at the hands of the Christian Brothers should now do something to help them and show their gratitude to them in a practical way. According to the last census the population of Limerick had increased and that increase would mean an extra tax on the educational activities of the Christian Brothers. That being so, he hoped the movement now inaugurated would meet with the success it deserved." The particular work proposed to be done will necessarily entail a very considerable expenditure, but in view of the fact that men of energy and organising ability have taken the matter up and that the citizens are never slow to contribute towards a truly laudable project we have no doubt, whatever the required amount will be forthcoming. As the City High Sheriff reminded the citizens in the course of his speech, the meeting on Thursday last, "the Christian Brothers had a great claim on them as Irishmen and a great claim on them as Limerick men." Councillor LAWRENCE recalled the interesting fact that the Brothers in Limerick were teaching the Irish language even long before the Gaelic League came into existence. That fact in itself shows, that these excellent and successful teachers realised long before the idea gained any ground in this country that for young Irishmen there is a distinct and definite connection between Nationalism and the full development of character. For reasons that need not be laboured, for they are quite obvious, it is most fitting that the centenary of the coming of the Brothers to Limerick be marked in some tangible manner, and that the citizens should be made to feel that the work of the Brothers is not a thing of the past but a thing of the present and the future. The fact that the Brothers have been in Limerick for over a hundred years and that they have been successful in their work is a fact that should be a source of pride to the citizens of Limerick. The fact that the Brothers have been successful in their work is a fact that should be a source of pride to the citizens of Limerick.
