MR. HALDANE IN GERMANY

STUDYING GERMAN ARMY METHODS.

The Berlin correspondent of the "Daily Mail" wires:—Mr. Haldane honoured me with an interview here just before dining with his German hosts at the Hotel Bristol last night. After telling me in what splendid spirits and health he had found the King, and how thoroughly his Majesty is prospering from his "cure," Mr. Haldane said—"I have come to Berlin quite in a private capacity as the guest of the Emperor William. I look forward to instructive days in inspecting the model establishments of his army, particularly the general staff organisation. Germany, as all the world knows, has much to teach military students, and I am here simply to avail myself of the opportunity of studying her institutions before engaging in any tinkering with our own."

Office officials, and in broad bag of money.
